

Distance Learning

Virtually all of our students have come to study at Raworth because they want to change their life style or career path.

The age and background of students varies tremendously, but we have designed our programmes to take this into account. This applies to distance learning programmes as much as to classroom based ones.

There are many reasons for choosing a distance learning programme:

- You can avoid travel to a classroom setting
- You can pace your speed and level of learning to fit exactly with your own personal circumstances
- You can slot programmes or modules into your schedule after they have been completed by classroom attendance. You can therefore 'catch up' with a yearly programme, without having to wait for the next academic year.
- You will have direct individual contact with your personal tutor, by phone or email
- You will receive detailed notes and all assessments at the beginning of your programme
- You can attend any classroom based sessions at no extra charge. Sometimes students do this, by agreement with the tutor, because they want extra visual help with a topic or because they are particularly interested in the topic.

The following modules can be studied by distance learning:

Anatomy and Physiology

Special price, £400 + VAT (Including Raworth exam)

A thorough and fascinating exploration of how the human body works. This foundation course takes you through all the major body systems and how they interrelate. This leads to a recognised qualification and is essential for all significant therapy training.
